

EHFCN WEBINAR

Corruption during Covid-19: Trends, drivers, and lessons learned for reducing corruption in health emergencies

Short description

Based on a report from CHR. MICHELSEN INSTITUTE (independent development research institute in Norway), her author, Daniela Cepeda Cuadrado, will recount how corruption materialised during Covid-19, what drove it and how it impacted people.

This report also highlights anti-corruption strategies deployed and lessons learned for use in other health emergencies.

Defined goals

- Lessons learned during the last three years should inform policy responses to ongoing and future health emergencies.

Contact details for more information

This webinar is an initiative of EHFCN, with the collaboration of U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre

- U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre
Chr. Michelsen Institute
<https://www.u4.no>

Contact person

- Daniela Cepeda Cuadrado: daniela.cepeda@cmi.no

EHFCN WEBINAR

Corruption during Covid-19: Trends, drivers, and lessons learned for reducing corruption in health emergencies

Speaker

- Daniela Cepeda Cuadrado: she is a public policy professional with experience working in the fields of anti-corruption, health and sustainable development. She works as an anti-corruption adviser at the U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre, providing policy support to the Global Network on Anti-Corruption, Transparency and Accountability. The network is composed by UNDP, UNODC, WHO, and the World Bank Group.
Previously, Daniela worked at Transparency International Global Health in the UK, developing research funding proposals and conducting policy advocacy as part of the Action for Global Health Network.
Daniela also worked at the United Nations, contributing to learning and training initiatives for sustainable development. There, she worked with UNDP to design and develop the online course “Anti-Corruption in the Context of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development”.
Daniela holds a Bachelor of Political, Economic, and Social Sciences (Honours) from the University of Sydney, and a Master of Public Policy from the Hertie School of Governance in Berlin.

